Boy, 4, Dies In Backyard Fresno Pool

Tuesday 28 Feb 1978

Jason Engelman, 4, was pronounced dead on arrival last night at St. Agnes Medical Center after he apparently fell into a swimming pool behind his home and drowned.

The accident occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Engelman on the 4800 block of East Indianapolis Ave., reported the Fresno County Coroner's Office.

A coroner spokesman said the youth was discovered shortly before 8 p.m. by his mother who had thought the boy had gone to play at a neighbor's house after taking a nap.

Instead, Mrs. Engelman found the child in the above-ground pool in approximately four feet of water, the spokesman said.

Oldtime Boxer Kid Peters, Peter Heizenrader, 69, Dies

Graveside services for Peter Heizenrader, 69, who once fought under the name of Kid Peters for the featherweight boxing championship of the San Joaquin Valley, will be held at 2 p.m. today in Fresno Memorial Gardens. Lisle Funeral Home is in charge.

Heizenrader, who lived in South Lake Tahoe, died Wednesday in Stanford Medical Center. He was born on the southwest side of Fresno in 1908 in a section called Russian Town. Heizenrader retired two years ago after a colorful career.

At one time he owned the House of Heizenrader, the Velvet Carpet and Heizenrader's Original Derby and a cafe known as the Friant Damsite.

Kirk Street, where Heizenrader was born, had the reputation of being a tough place to live. Although it was only three blocks in length it produced, besides Kid Peters, such old time boxers as Eddie Mahoney, Billy Mahoney, Kid Kopecks, Sammy Nagel and Ray Chavez.

Old newspaper reports reveal Heizenrader made his boxing debut against an old trial horse, Mike Romano, and defeated him in a tough contest, then went on to beat all the fighters of his class. Heizenrader retired in 1925 after four years of boxing and 57 bouts.

Heizenrader ran for City Council in 1961 and lost. He was a member of the Edison Social Club.
