The DATA and STYLE

COMMENTS on the DATA and STYLE

This volume of births, deaths and marriages for the years 1920 through 1929 presents the information in the same style as in Volume One (1889-1909) and Volume Two (1910-1919). Some of the news items were edited to provide a normal presentation of information; minor extraneous material was deleted.

As in the earlier works children and women's names are often lacking. Birth announcements usually mention the father's name, rarely the mother's and seldom the child's. The death of a child, especially before the age of twelve, was announced as the child of the father. Women's death notices sometimes mentioned the deceased's maiden name, i.e. Mrs.A.B.Smith, wife of A.B.Smith, or, Mrs.Anna Smith and, rarely, born Anna Jones. Fortunately, marriage reports usually gave the bride's maiden surname. As reportage expanded, death notices began to include names of survivors, their residences, circumstances of death, some personal attributes, employment, public service, place of burial, and officiating clergy. Marriage notices often expanded to include parents' names, relatives, location and date of ceremony and officiating judge or clergy. Toward the end of the decade more and more marriages were held out of state because of California's new three day waiting period enacted in 1927. Divorce proceedings rarely mentioned the married woman's maiden name except when she sought to have it restored. Quite often it was possible to retrieve the maiden name from the original notice of marriage.

The spelling of names are generally shown as printed with obvious errors corrected.

When using the ALL NAME INDEX be aware that names reported in the newspaper were often spelled wrong especially in the case of Scandinavian names where Olson becomes Olsen or Christiansen becomes Christanson at distressingly frequent intervals. Of course Irish and Scottish names were similary abused where Daley and Daly; O'Neal and O'Neill; Murphy and Murphey; MacDonald and McDonald were in reality the same. But family names do change over time. One local example is the Duncan MacKericher family. Of Nova Scotian origins the MacKerichers operated a ranch at Cleone and were prominent in local affairs. The newspaper called them McKerricher, MacKerricker and just plain Mack. The true original spelling is MacKericher with one "r", but one of the descendants thought that it was "tonier" to have two "r's" and so it now appears on a popular state park which was formerly the old home ranch.

Another problem researchers deal with is the common custom of persons sometimes using a middle name as the first name. When the obituary appeared with the deceased's full "Christian" or given name, that unused and unfamiliar first name often is a surprise to all who knew the deceased.

So, searchers for Holquist should try Holmquist, Thurstroms, Torstroms, Hansens, Hansons, Nelson, Nelsens etc. Thomas Jones may be same as Thomas A.Jones; Helen Marguerite Smith may be Helen Margaret Smith or Helen Margot Smith. There was no spell check on the Linotype machine other than the editor!

INTRODUCTION

THIS VOLUME

This volume, the third in a series, chronicles the births, deaths and marriages from 1920 through 1929 in one of California's more remote and beautiful counties .

Mendocino County occupying over ninety miles of California's rugged North Pacific Coast was first populated by white settlers in 1851. The region's immense stands of giant redwood trees attracted entrepreneurs whose sawmills soon drew immigrants from the rest of the United States, Canada and Europe for work in the woods, mills, railroads and harbors. The first local newspaper, the Mendocino Beacon, began publication in 1877 and continues to the present. In the same year of the incorporation of Fort Bragg in 1889, soon to be major commercial center on the coast, a newspaper appeared in May of that year. It became a record of events on the coast and of the lives of its citizens as well as news from other parts of the surrounding area. Vital information on births, deaths and marriages as reported in this paper was abstracted as a research aid by the Mendocino Coast Genealogical Society. The first volume published in 1995 recorded data drawn from extant copies of the Fort Bragg Advocate from its inception in 1889 through 1909. A second volume published in 1996 carried the vital records through 1919. This third volume continues the account from the Fort Bragg Advocate through its last issue on April 6, 1927. The following week, on April 13, 1927, its successor the Fort Bragg Advocate and News continued the unbroken publication record. Another local paper, the Fort Bragg News (1918-1927), was merged into the new paper at this time.

From the April 6, 1927 Fort Bragg Advocate:

"After 39 years' service under the same ownership, the Fort Bragg Advocate wishes to announce that this is the last issue before change of ownership, and takes this opportunity to thank the hosts of subscribers, advertisers and friends for past courtesies. The Advocate was taken over by the late Charles J. Cavanaugh 39 years ago this coming week, and has grown up with our city.

E.P. Thurston of Ukiah and A.A. Heeser of Mendocino are taking the paper over. Mr. Thurston as editor and publisher of the Ukiah Dispatch Democrat and Mr. Heeser as editor and proprietor of the Mendocino Beacon are well known to the people of the county and the coast through their long period of newspaper work and need no introduction to our readers. They have been doing constructive work for the advancement of the county and particularly for the localities in which their respective papers are published for many years, and the people of this city and section may be assured that they will labor diligently for its advancement.

We are sure that the new management will enjoy the same goodwill as has been ours in the past."

THE DECADE

The appellation "Roaring Twenties" has been applied to this decade of United States history. While this title does not exactly describe life on the North Coast in that decade, many national trends did influence local affairs. Although the 1921 postwar depression was moderately felt, the continued operation of the lumber trade tended to smooth out economic ripples. Yet, depletion of the redwood forests continued to push the logging operations further eastward into the coastal hills and valleys. This decade saw the greatest extent of logging railroads with the growing use of Caterpillar tractors and trucks began to replace steam donkeys and locomotives. There was a consolidation of redwood operators and new ownerships for some mills.

Recurring threads through this period are the numerous reports of illegal liquor smuggling, possession and vending. The Volstead Act took effect in January 1920. To the hard drinking woodsmen the new law was an affront and did little to abate their thirst for alcohol. Demand invites supply which was met, in part, by importation of Canadian and local manufacture of homemade booze called "jackass". The harbor at Noyo was the scene of many midnight landings by strange hard faced men. Law enforcement struggled to control this illegal traffic with much publicity about their successful arrests of motorists transporting illicit alcohol, raids on stills and wine-making setups, and the seizures of hooch.

In 1921 the population of the county was reported as 20% foreign born with 35 countries represented. Italy and Finland topped the list.

Transportation in the County was deeply affected by the widespread availability of the automobile. As personal transport grew, public services adapted and, in some cases, diminished. Fort Bragg enjoyed railroad Pullman car service direct to the San Francisco ferry at Sausalito until November 1929 when declining business made the service unprofitable. Little used rail stations were gradually closed. A gasoline-powered busbody on railroad wheels called the "Skunk" replaced the steam train on the California Western (1929). Conventions of interested groups formed to promote construction of the highway that was to become US 101 from San Francisco to Eureka (1928). Agitation for a bridge spanning the Golden Gate began to surface. On July 29, 1927 the top speed for automobiles in California was set at 40 MPH. Review of the death notices from the paper indicates that deaths from automobile mishaps grew along with car ownership in the State.

People still married, however, even though a new state law on the issuance of marriage licenses by county clerks required a three day waiting period (effective July 29, 1927). Heretofore applications could be sent in without any personal appearance. The new law required the parties to come back three days after filing their application. Reports of marriages in Reno, Nevada, and in Oregon increased tremendously. Yet, the local school boards would not hire married female teachers.

The first caesarian birth in the area was December 7, 1921 in the Fort Bragg Hospital which became the Redwood Coast hospital on February 23, 1923. Many children from families up and down the coast were now born at the hospital rather than at home or at the midwife's. One of the County's pretty girls became Miss America in 1925.

Locally significant items mentioned construction of the Fort Bragg City Hall (October 19, 1921); a total eclipse of the sun on September 19, 1923; the dirigible Shenandoah flew over Fort Bragg October 20, 1924; Charles Cavanagh, the longtime editor of the Fort Bragg Advocate died March 18, 1925; two weeks of bad storm on the coast with 10.55" of rain caused much damage (December 1926) with another heavy rain breaking a severe drought in December 1929; the Finnish Methodist church in Fort Bragg was built in March 1927; Point Arena was devastated by fire (1927), a major fire at the Advocate and News office wrecked the two Linotypes (March 1928); Russian Gulch was proposed for a state park (June 1928), the old sawmill at Irmulco burned (September 1928); Finkbine-Guild Lumber Company became Southern Redwood in October 1928, but the Rockport mill closed forever in July 1929; the Ukiah highschool burned on November 16, 1928; the Willits highschool on November 23, 1928; and the Mendocino Grammar school on December 3, 1929; and, finally, the Fort Bragg postmaster said that free city delivery was "near" pending more street paving and curb work (September 1929).

Elsewhere in the United States, President Coolidge's 1923 address to Congress was the first to be broadcasted, television programming began in New York City (1928) and talking movies were introduced (1928). Fort Braggers were big movie fans and the State Theatre announced July 24, 1929 that they would install sound equipment. A full page of movie news appeared each week in the paper touting the films now showing and those "coming soon".

THE MENDOCINO COAST GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

The Mendocino Coast Genealogical Society, founded in 1976, has supported and sponsored the production of these books as a community project to record the local history of Fort Bragg and Mendocino County's pioneer settlers and their descendants. The assistance and enthusiasm of the publisher and staff of the Fort Bragg Advocate-News, successor to the Fort Bragg Advocate and the Fort Bragg Advocate and News, is gratefully acknowledged and deeply appreciated by the Society's researchers.
