INTRODUCTION

THIS VOLUME

This volume, the fourth in a series, chronicles the births, deaths and marriages from 1930 through 1939 in one of California's more remote and beautiful counties .

Mendocino County with over ninety miles of California's rugged North Pacific Coast was first populated by white settlers in 1851. The immense stands of giant redwood trees there attracted entrepreneurs whose sawmills soon drew workers from the rest of the United States, Canada and Europe to labor in the woods, mills, railroads and harbors. The first local newspaper, the Mendocino Beacon, began publication in 1877 and continues to the present day. Just four years after the first settlement in 1885 Fort Bragg was incorporated. Soon to be a major commercial center on the coast, it got its first newspaper when the Fort Bragg Advocate appeared on May 29, 1889. Not much of a production at first, it soon developed into a valuable record of the lives of its citizens and of news events on the coast. As communications improved the paper expanded with news from other parts of the surrounding area.

Recognizing that vital information on births, deaths and marriages reported in the newspaper could be a valuable research resource, these items were abstracted by the Mendocino Coast Genealogical Society as a public service. The first volume published in 1995 recorded data drawn from extant copies of the Fort Bragg Advocate from its inception in 1889 through 1909. A second volume published in 1996 carried the abstracts through 1919. The third volume continued the account from the Fort Bragg Advocate through its last issue on April 6, 1927. The following week, on April 13, 1927, its successor the Fort Bragg Advocate and News continued the unbroken publication record. Another local paper, the Fort Bragg News (1918-1927), was merged into the new paper at the same time. Volume Three ended with 1929; volume Four continues the record through 1939.

THE DECADE

The Great Depression reached into all aspects of American life. The North Coast was not an exception. Despite the disastrous plunge of the redwood industry, the County managed to survive. The biggest lumber operation in Fort Bragg drastically curtailed operations but kept its labor force together by mortgaging stocks of unsawn logs and paying employees throughout the troubled times albeit at only 18¢ an hour. Fortunately, costs of housing and food were also low. Other mills on the coast closed forever. This decade saw the gradual withdrawal of the logging railroads from the coastal woods as the use of caterpillar tractors and big trucks replaced steam donkeys and locomotives. Consolidation of redwood operators, new ownerships for some mills and the introduction of new logging methods radically changed the lumber business.

National politics had little impact on the County; but, the economy did. Demand for wood products was poor and job opportunities vanished. Prohibition was repealed in 1933, California voting three to one for the change. Along with repeal came the first state sales tax on August 1, 1933 at the rate of 2½%.

Transportation in the County was transformed by the widespread availability of the automobile. As personal transport grew, the old camp system used by the logging companies faded out as it was no longer necessary for the work force to live near their work in the woods. In 1933 the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge began. When it opened May 28, 1937, Mendocino County's access to San Francisco improved tremendously. Fort Bragg finally got its first state highway in August 1933 when the Shore Line highway was taken into state maintenance. The old gravel surface was soon paved giving improved access to this picturesque coastal region. At the time the statewide speed limit was 45 MPH.

Fort Bragg's first airport was established in 1930, but commercial air transport never developed. However, the automobile took over and in great numbers. Despite the depression, automobile ownership soared. Some of the railroads in the County pulled up lightly-used branchlines in logged-out areas. While the ocean was the region's earliest transportation mode for freight and passengers, this decade saw the demise of the small steamships that called at the tiny, exposed harbors of the coast.

News items of this decade noted in passing:

- The Federal Census count for Mendocino County was 23,457 versus 24,116 in 1920.
- Civil War veterans were allowed to get free hunting and fishing licenses. In 1929 seven hunting licenses and eleven angling licenses were issued statewide.
- The movie house in Fort Bragg was converted to talking pictures (1930).
- Rails removed from the Sherwood branch railroad went to Boulder Dam in Nevada to be used as reinforcing iron (1931). The line was completely removed by 1934.
- The Noyo River channel at Fort Bragg was dredged and a rock jetty installed (1931).
- Drillers at Point Arena hit oil at 6,600 feet (May 23, 1931). The flow was not enough to justify further exploration.
- The Vichy Springs resort burned (January 25, 1932).
- Construction on the new state highway Cloverdale to Hopland began (March 1932).
- The old Redman's Hall in Fort Bragg was torn down (April 20, 1932).
- The steamer Fort Bragg was wrecked at Coos Bay, Oregon (September 5, 1932).
- The first program of the Fort Bragg Symphony was February 8, 1935.
- Free city mail delivery commenced in Fort Bragg (April 1, 1936).
- White lines began to appear on highway centerlines (1936).
- The San Francisco Bay Bridge opened in November 1936.
- The first Rhododendron show was held in Fort Bragg, May 1, 1937.
- The worst storm to hit the coast since 1921 caused extensive damage (January 11, 1939).
- In 1939 there was a devastating fire at the Union Lumber Company in Fort Bragg that caused severe losses and curtailed operations for several months. Following reconstruction, it was the most modern, streamlined lumbering plants in California and well positioned to face the heavy demands for product in the next decade.

THE MENDOCINO COAST GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

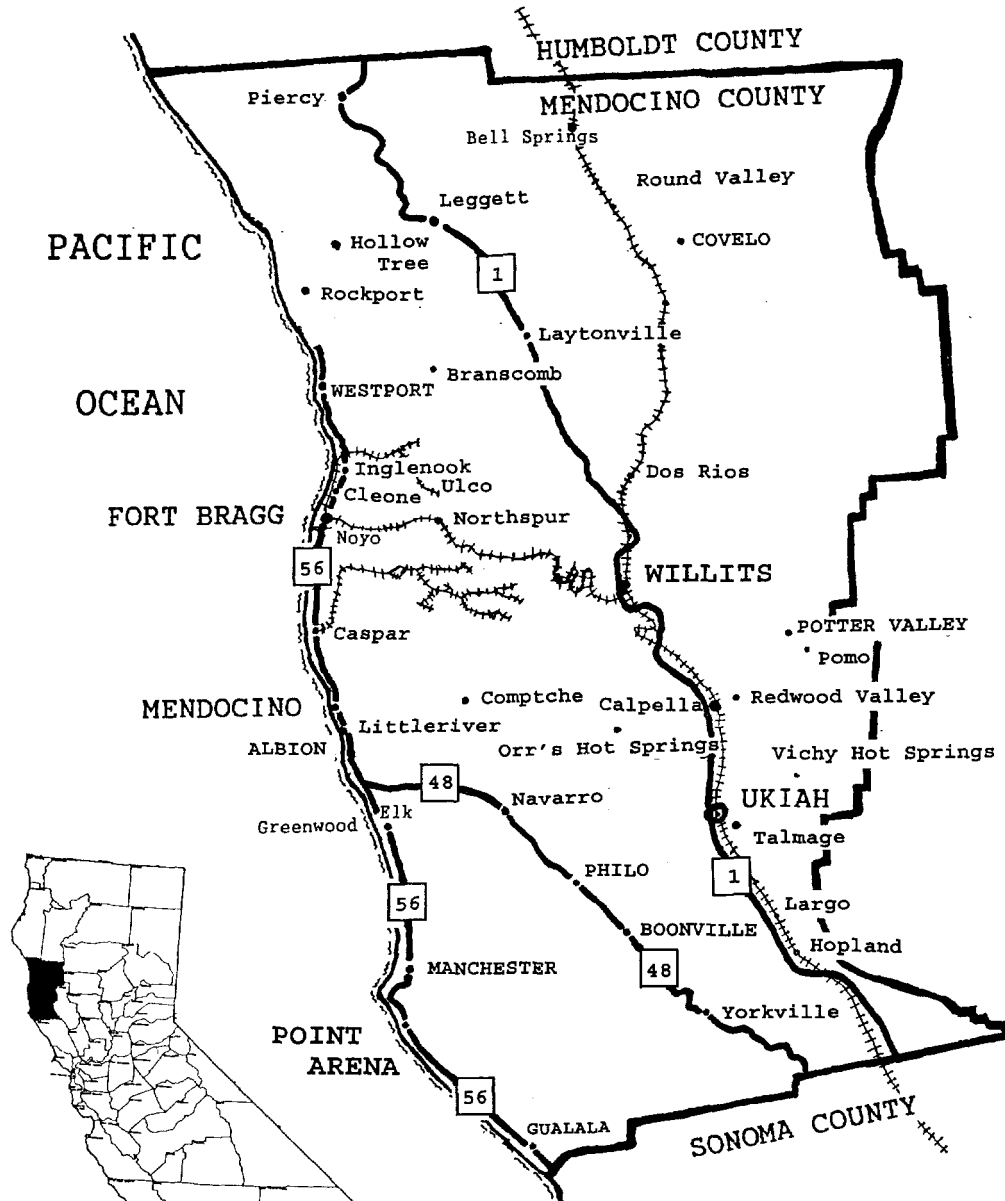

The Mendocino Coast Genealogical Society, founded in 1976, has supported and sponsored the production of these books as a community project to record reported items of Fort Bragg and Mendocino County's pioneer settlers and their descendants. The careful and diligent review of this work by Mrs. Alice Holmes of Comptche is especially appreciated. The assistance and enthusiasm of the publisher and staff of the Fort Bragg Advocate-News, successor to the Fort Bragg Advocate and the Fort Bragg Advocate and News, cannot be overstated.
